Oh no! Cornelius wasn't looking well lately... come to find out he has COVID and has to CORNtine! 🤔🙏

This "husky" lil guy and other farmers were social distancing before it was cool, but it's true that vaccination rates in rural communities are generally lower than in metropolitan areas.

I often think about what happens in agriculture when farming communities get COVID. Life on the farm is very demanding - the cows must be milked, the crop must be planted/tended to/harvested, Cornelius needs to propagate his tassel in the wind 🤔

So this is just a reminder that if you haven't already, PLEASE get vaccinated.

And if you're anything like me, maybe you were a little skeptical of all of this COVID stuff. And one thing I preach often is that you should always go to the source. It's the whole reason I started this page- to share the story of agriculture- straight from the people who do this all for a living!

So it's important that rather than a google search or whatnot, we talk to the real experts. One place that helped me a lot was Iowa Immunizes - they put me in touch with epidemiologists and professionals like Dr. Nathan Boonstra, Dr Natoshia Askelson, Dr Melanie Wellington, Heather Meador, and SO much more!

They can do the same for you. If you have any questions, please follow and message them or check out these helpful links for more info.

We are all in this together and have to take care of one another. Stay safe out there and Happy Holidays! 🙏
